For Immediate Release: October 23, 2017

New Exhibit: Dreams That Matter

Tacoma Historical Society is pleased to present its newest exhibit honoring Tacoma’s unsung heroes who have worked for social justice and civil rights. The exhibit is funded by a grant from the Puyallup Tribe of Indians.

Exhibit Schedule: October 27, 2017 – February 2018, Tacoma Historical Society Museum, 919 Pacific Avenue. Open Wednesday through Saturday, 11 am to 4 pm. Free admission.

Opening Reception: Friday, October 27, 5:30-7:30pm.

Contacts:
Tacoma Historical Society: (253) 472-3738, info@tacomahistory.org
Bill Baarsma, THS President, (253) 759-6765, wbaarsma@harbornet.com
Brendan Balaam, THS Curator, curator@tacomahistory.org

Tacoma Historical Society is pleased to present its newest exhibit, Dreams That Matter, at the Tacoma Historical Society Museum, located at 919 Pacific Avenue in downtown Tacoma. Developed by curator Brendan Balaam and designed by Chris Fiala Erlich, the exhibit will run from October 27, 2017, through February 2018, with free admission.

THS Curator Brendon Balaam commented:

“We all make choices that are later seen as mistakes. Some are accidents, such as the collapse of the first Tacoma Narrows Bridge, “Galloping Gertie,” just four months after it opened. Yet some are deeply rooted in racism, such as the forced removal of all of Tacoma’s Chinese residents in 1885, or Tacoma voters rejecting legislation to end housing discrimination in 1964.”

“A few have had the courage to speak out against social injustice, including Tacoma’s Mayor Harry P. Cain who protested the World War Two internment of Japanese-American citizens. Some who have spoken out have never been recognized. Their service to our community is only now beginning to be considered necessary and newsworthy. This exhibit was created to honor the unsung people of the Tacoma area who spoke out to defend their dreams and fight for the universal rights of all.”

THS President Bill Baarsma added:

“This exhibit is dedicated to former Tacoma mayor Harold Moss, whose life experiences as recounted in his book, Fighting for Dreams That Mattered, have driven us to make this exhibit a reality, as well as to the 245 Tacoma residents who have served on the City’s Human Rights Commission over the past 50 years. It is our hope that this exhibit will serve as the beginning of an archive of resource materials on Tacoma’s Civil Rights history. We extend an invitation to our visitors to contribute information or artifacts to this collection, or to let us know of anyone we might contact to help us build this collection. Above all, we want this exhibit to start a conversation about the people and stories we do and do not consider to be a part of Tacoma’s history.”

###

About Tacoma Historical Society: Tacoma Historical Society is a community-supported volunteer-driven 501(c)(3) charitable, nonprofit corporation, and is dedicated to the preservation, promotion and presentation of the history of the City of Tacoma and its people. Tacoma Historical Society works to forge connections between past and present generations, fostering an appreciation of the past and a sense of place within our community’s history.

www.tacomahistory.org